C-Enduro is an ocean robot used to collect data at sea over long periods of time. Unlike a conventional boat, it has no people on board and instead is remotely operated via a radio or satellite link. The vehicle sits on the surface of the water and collects data using sensors fitted underneath its deck or mounted to its mast.